Getting the Job Done

It is my pleasure to welcome you to the 2016 Annual NCCMP Conference in beautiful San Diego. This year’s conference comes at a time when our country faces a number of fundamental choices. While the most obvious are those related to the impending elections, other choices have significant implications for the quality of life for those whom we have direct responsibility.

Specifically, they include the active and retired workers whose labors since the 1940’s have made possible the benefit programs which provide economic security for workers and their families against catastrophic health care expenses and enable workers to retire with dignity following a lifetime of service to the industries in which multiemployer plans are the norm.

Over the past two decades our funds have faced the full range of economic circumstances and (with notable exceptions), have emerged battered and bruised, but still an essential part of the lives of plan participants. From the “feasts” of the late 1990’s when full employment and benefit improvements were the norm, to the recession driven “famines” of the early 2000’s, to the series of federal laws that have compounded the effects of a protracted and lethargic recovery and imposed new and often costly additional requirements, our health and pension funds have had to find creative and often painful ways of responding to continue to meet those historic obligations to protect their participants. Today’s choices are no less important. Consistent with this year’s theme of “Unfinished Business,” over the next few months we have the opportunity to look to the future and support the creation of optional new pension plan designs as the final phase of the three-part comprehensive pension reform initiative advocated by the Retirement Security Review Commission; in particular, options for those industries in which maintaining the status quo is no longer feasible.

While the national elections mean an abbreviated legislative calendar, Congress’ commitment to taking care of its own unfinished business related to comprehensive multiemployer pension reform makes enactment of this legislation this year a distinct possibility.

Similarly, following the elections we also anticipate opportunities as well as new challenges to emerge for our health benefit plans as Congress is expected to move beyond its gridlock over the Affordable Care Act. As we get poised to take advantage of a more responsive environment to enact much needed technical corrections to the ACA, the NCCMP is optimistic that Congress will deal with this aspect of its own unfinished business and take a more active partnership with multiemployer plans in this process.

Once again we have assembled an outstanding group of the top experts in the multiemployer benefits community to be with us over the next few days. We encourage you to engage them as they discuss these and related issues that are relevant to your plans.

Fraternally,

Sean McGarvey
Chairman, Board of Directors
NCCMP
Unfinished…but not for long

As we gather once again to learn about the issues confronting our plans, one can’t help but look back to the challenges our plans have confronted since they were created and the initiatives in which we have collectively engaged to enable them to survive and flourish. Looking back over the more than 70-year history of our plans dating back to WWII, it is one that is characterized by repeated challenges, whether driven by economic circumstances or government policies. As a general rule, the plans and the industries which they serve have been sufficiently resilient to survive these challenges, but the process has rarely been smooth.

The current environment is no exception. While we have made excellent progress in getting the first two-thirds of the enabling legislation for comprehensive multiemployer pension reform enacted, the regulatory regime has fallen short of the desired legislative intent. Likewise, the remaining aspect of reform - new plan design – was omitted from the original, broader legislation, not for substantive reasons, but because of a jurisdictional dispute between Congressional committees. Nevertheless, the intervening time has been used constructively to significantly strengthen and refine the proposed model to address concerns expressed by other stakeholders over the funding of legacy plans and to eliminate potential conflicts of interest.

Earlier this month the House Committee on Education and the Workforce issued a “discussion draft” of the composite plan legislation. It was described that way to underscore that this remains a work in progress. As part of that review process the Committee has also scheduled a hearing on the composite proposal to permit a full vetting of the model and encourage an active dialogue to advance the legislation in hopes of seeing it enacted before the end of the year.

Over the next few days we will review the substance of these and other legislative and regulatory items affecting our plans. This year we will be trying a somewhat different and less formal format designed to encourage greater dialogue between those on the dais and the audience. We hope you will find it more inviting and welcome your feedback. In addition to our formal educational and social events, we hope you will take some time to stop by our exhibit hall to meet and speak with our sponsors who make our conference possible and allow us to keep the registration fees as low as possible. It is always our policy that the money raised through conference registrations and sponsorships be put back into the conference to give you the best possible experience.

Finally, if you find you need additional assistance or if we have missed something that we or the hotel staff can provide, please stop by the NCCMP office and tell us. We will do our best to accommodate your request, if it is within our power to grant.

We thank you for your participation and support for the work of your NCCMP.

Sincerely,

Randy G. DeFrehn

Current Status of Pension Reform

This year’s Saturday Seminar will focus on the current status of pension reform measures, including the implementation of the Multiemployer Pension Plan Reform Act (MPRA), the recently released discussion draft language to implement the new composite plan design, and options that have been proposed to deal with the impending insolvency of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation multiemployer fund (PBGC).

Initial Results of MPRA

The trustees of deeply troubled multiemployer plans were given valuable new tools in MPRA that would enable plans that would otherwise become insolvent to intervene early if, and only if, such intervention will allow the plan to remain solvent in the long-run. Now, nearly two years after MPRA was passed, eight applications have been submitted to Treasury to put those new tools into action. Of those eight applications, Treasury has rendered two decisions and both applications were denied because they did not comply with final guidance. This session will explore the status of current applications, as well as considerations in light of the final guidance and recent Treasury decisions for plans that qualify for relief under MPRA, but have not yet applied.

Update on Composite Plans

The final element of the comprehensive multiemployer pension plan reform recommendations of the Retirement Security Review Commission was to encourage new and innovative plan designs. Composite plans are one form of new optional plan design intended to preserve and enhance long-term, regular monthly retirement income security for participants, while removing the obstacles to participation by existing or new contributing employers. The House Committee on Education and the Workforce recently released discussion draft legislation to enable the creation of composite plan designs. The second part of this session will explore the discussion draft legislation, the measures taken in the construction of the discussion draft that strengthen legacy defined benefit plans protections and efforts to remove conflicts of interest to address concerns raised during drafting, the results of stress testing of the composite and legacy defined benefit plan system in response to adverse market conditions, and the status of the legislative efforts to enact this new design option.

PBGC Premium Proposals

Even as some deeply troubled plans consider difficult measures to restore their funds to solvency, the PBGC faces its own financial challenges in the years ahead. This historic backstop of multiemployer defined benefit pension plans is projected to become insolvent itself by 2024. Especially given the denials of the two suspension applications decided to date, the impending insolvency of the PBGC is cause for grave concern. In response, a number of options to restore the program to solvency have been proposed – all of which include, at least in part, significant increases in premiums paid by plans themselves. The NCCMP reconvened the Retirement Security Review Commission, specifically to consider the proposals as well as their impact on the multiemployer community. This session will consider the current proposals to restore the PBGC to solvency, as well as the results of the Commission discussions, and positions that certain industries have taken.

Over the past decade multiemployer pension plans have had to confront a host of economic challenges which have been met by a series of legislative initiatives designed to allow them to continue to meet their decades-long objective of allowing participants to retire with dignity. While our efforts have been generally successful, the remaining leg of our comprehensive reform proposals remains to be enacted. Chairman McGarvey will discuss the need to address this and other “unfinished business” to be enacted before the end of the 114th Congress in December.

As the Obama Administration is nearing its end, Assistant Secretary Borzi will take this opportunity to look back at EBSA’s accomplishments with respect to employee benefits generally and the multiemployer community specifically over the past eight years and to look ahead to share with us what she perceives to be what remains “Unfinished Business” for this Administration.
The PBGC was conceived as the social “safety net” for American workers who had given their careers to an employer or an industry and, through no fault of their own found the plan sponsor was no longer around to live up to their commitments of providing lifetime income through retirement. It has a legislative mandate to help preserve and grow the current defined benefit system and to do so at the lowest possible cost. While the multiemployer guaranty fund operated at a surplus from its inception through the early 2000s economic upheavals since then have placed approximately 10 percent of all plans in jeopardy of insolvency.

For a number of years the Agency has reported a steadily growing deficit. Congress has expressed concern over the growing deficit and the Administration has proposed massive increases with features which are likely to cause the multiemployer system to follow the trend set by the single employer community.

As the head of the PBGC Mr. Reeder will discuss the current status and direction of the agency and the need for additional funding.
Implementation of MPRA

To date, eight plans have made application to take advantage of the relief available pursuant to MPRA to restore their funds to solvency.

Two decisions have been rendered thus far and both applications were denied because they did not meet the requirements of the final regulations.

This session will explore the experiences of those who have gone through the process, review the impact of the final regulations, and discuss what questions plans that qualify for MPRA relief measures should consider as they decide whether to utilize the tools available to them.

Composite Plans: Discerning Fact from Fiction

The final aspect of our comprehensive reform initiative involves the enactment of new flexible plan designs as an alternative to individual account defined contribution plans for those industries and employers who are no longer willing to continue to participate in our traditional defined benefit plans.

This panel will discuss the discussion draft legislation released earlier this month by the House Committee on Education and the Workforce, enhancements to the protections in place for legacy defined benefit plans and efforts... to remove conflicts of interests in response to concerns raised during the drafting, as well as the results of recent stress testing of the legacy/composite plan system to determine its ability to withstand market volatility that would replicate that of the past decade.

The Future of the PBGC

Even as some deeply troubled plans consider difficult measures to restore their funds to solvency, the PBGC faces its own financial challenges in the years ahead. While the magnitude of the deficit is massive, simply raising premiums as a way to address the problems creates a new set of problems, and new types of existential threats for the very plans and participants the PBGC was created to protect.

This session will consider the current proposals to restore the PBGC to solvency, as well as a range of recommendations proposed in the deliberations
Legislative Update

As we focus on attaining a better understanding of the current statutory and regulatory environment and the current agenda that constitutes our retirement related “unfinished business” agenda, it is important to recall that nothing in Washington happens in a vacuum. Other business, both related and unrelated, can be the ultimate determining factors in whether any legislative initiative succeeds.

This session will examine those factors that are part of the overall mix that will determine the fate of our proposals.

Retirement Security Trends: An International Perspective

Like everything else in today’s society, ideas influencing the design and governance of retirement plans are becoming increasingly global. A decade ago the NCCMP joined with our counterpart organizations to form an alliance of organizations which serve the multiemployer community in jurisdictions across North America and Europe. In 2013 that organization was expanded to become the Global Pension Alliance and include other organizations whose focus on preservation of retirement programs is consistent with ours and which allow all of us to leverage our individual strengths to become more effective by speaking with a unified voice.

Dr. Briganti has been an integral partner in those efforts and will bring us up to date on their most recent developments.

Contemporary Compliance Issues

This workshop on compliance issues of interest to retirement and health plan sponsors is intended to provide an informal forum for trustees and plan professionals to address a range of current issues relevant to plan administration. Among other issues, the panelists will lead discussions on the 2016 (and Proposed 2019) Form 5500 retirement plan compliance questions; recent developments in the “new” IRS determination letter program; protective plan language suggested by recent case law; compliance with the benefit plan mandates and accommodations requirements of ACA Section 1557; HIPAA privacy and security audits by the Department of Health and Human Services; ACA reporting on the Forms 1095-B and 1095-C; and common findings from audits of health plan operations by the Department of Labor.
The Center for Disease Control (CDC) defines patients with diabetes as those with Hemoglobin A1C levels of 6.5 or greater. It also warns that those with A1C levels of 5.7 to 6.4 are at risk of developing this disease. They have come to be known as having “pre-diabetes” as a means of increasing awareness of the need for changes in lifestyle to prevent up to 30% of those with the condition from progressing to full-blown diabetes. Nevertheless, medical practitioners and others have raised serious questions about whether such efforts are simply making many more of us “patients” when we will never develop the disease. This session is designed to help determine how much is too much awareness, diverting much needed resources.

The ACA After the 2016 Election

In this session, our expert panel will offer their assessments of challenges faced by our health plans due to the ACA, as well as opportunities for meaningful change that may arise after the new Congress convenes. The session will review proposals to improve the interface between multiemployer and exchange plans, consider alternative sources of funding exchange subsidies if the excise tax is repealed, and consider future designs, such as the bipartisan proposals to supplement exchange coverage for small employers. Finally, the experts will dust off their crystal balls to offer predictions about what to expect after the coming November elections.

What is the NCCMP?

The NCCMP is YOUR organization. It was created in response to the first draft of ERISA’s exclusion of specific rules for multiemployer plans, assuming that the traditional corporate model for providing employer sponsored health and retirement benefits was universal. Over the ensuing four decades, the NCCMP has led the community’s engagement with legislators, regulators and the courts to create an environment in which multiemployer plans can be most effective in meeting their collective legal and moral objectives to act for the “sole and exclusive benefit” of plan participants.

These are lofty goals, but what does that mean? Why is it important to support the activities of organization? Who will do its work if you don’t? This session was created in response to a recommendation from one of our members to address these and other questions you may have to increase your familiarity with the NCCMP.

With 40 years of experience serving multiemployer plans, their participants and sponsoring organizations, Randy has served as an administrator of national pension, health and welfare benefit plans in the U.S. and Canada; an employee benefits consultant; a registered investment advisor; and since 2000, as their lead advocate and chief spokesman on matters of public policy. He regularly testifies before committees of the United States House of Representatives, Senate, and administrative agencies with jurisdiction over multiemployer plans. He is often consulted by government officials, quoted in the mainstream and trade press in the US and Europe and has provided commentary on the funded status of multiemployer defined benefit pension plans on CNBC’s “The Kudlow Report;” MSNBC’s “Dylan Ratigan Show;” and on National Public Radio.

During his tenure the NCCMP has been instrumental passage of a variety of legislative measures to protect the interests of these plans and their participants, including the Pension Protection Act of 2006 and the Multiemployer Pension Reform Act of 2014 (MPRA) which provided additional voluntary tools for trustees of plans otherwise heading for insolvency to remain solvent and preserve participants’ benefits above what they would have received under previous law.

Recognizing that employee benefit trends no longer respect geographic boundaries, in 2009 Randy joined with like-minded advocates in Canada and the European Union as a founding member of the Consortium of Advocates for Worker Benefit Security to share information regarding developing trends and coordinate comments and responses to government proposals and quasi-governmental regulatory authorities. This consortium was expanded in 2013 to become the Global Pension Alliance which represents a wide array of organizations and pension plan sponsors.

Under his leadership, the NCCMP received the National Electrical Contractor Association’s “Industry Partner Award” for its work to preserve and protect multiemployer pension plans. Personally, Randy was recognized as a “CORPaTH Champion.” Institutional Investor magazine has named him a member of their Pension 40 each year since its inception in 2013. This has been described as a listing of “the 40 most influential people in the battle to decide the future of U.S. pensions.” In addition, Randy received the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans 2015 Public Service Award which recognizes an individual’s contribution and concern for others through the advocacy and advancement of employee benefit plans.

Randy is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh School of Social Work and earned a Master of Arts in Industrial Relations from St. Francis College, Loretto, Pennsylvania.

Charles A. Storke
Trucker Huss

Charles Storke joined Trucker Huss as of counsel in early 1996 and has been a director in the firm since 1998. Before that, he spent more than 25 years at Pillsbury Madison & Sutro, where he had been a partner since 1978. He has over 30 years of experience in the employee benefits field, and specializes in representing regional, state-wide and local multiemployer pension and health and welfare plans, including the Western Conference of Teamsters Pension Trust Fund, the largest Taft-Hartley trust in the United States.

With this background, Mr. Storke has developed substantial expertise in evaluating the legal implications of plan investments in the many new investment vehicles available to large pension plans; harmonizing the sometimes dissimilar interests of a large body of participants working in a variety of jobs for large and small employers; the criteria trustees may properly use in selecting plan investments (e.g., “social investing,” union versus nonunion companies); reconciling the diverse and sometimes conflicting perspectives, interests and opinions of the individual trustees so they can reach a collective decision that conforms to the fiduciary standards of the governing law; overcoming the inherent conflicts that arise when trustees are selected by contributing employers and union bargaining representatives (these same trustees, when not wearing their fiduciary hats, often meet each other as adversaries across a collective bargaining table).

Mr. Storke is an expert on fiduciary liability insurance coverage issues; his reputation and many years of experience have also proved invaluable in obtaining and preserving fiduciary liability insurance for Taft-Hartley trustees at a reasonable cost. He has considerable knowledge and experience with tax-qualification and other Internal Revenue Code issues for multiemployer pension plans, particularly those covering non-bargaining unit employees of contributing employers.

He has participated in the development of innovative managed health care programs for several multiemployer plans covering thousands of forest products and food processing workers in the western United States and has assisted those plans in evaluating the legal risks associated with the implementation of aggressive cost-containment programs. He has been instrumental in designing and implementing a hybrid defined benefit-defined contribution multiemployer pension plan structure that gives Taft-Hartley trustees wide flexibility in maintaining negotiated pension levels while providing significant allocations to individual accounts for participants.

Mr. Storke has advised plan sponsors on the fiduciary responsibility and prohibited transaction issues involved in a variety of single customer and pooled investment arrangements. He has represented plan fiduciaries in connection with Department of Labor and Internal Revenue Service audits and federal court litigation under ERISA, and has represented multiemployer pension plans in defending challenges to the enrolled actuary’s determination of unfunded vested benefits liabilities in connection with employer withdrawal liability assessments under the Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act.
of 1980. He has counseled trustees of financially troubled pension plans on their responsibilities under the funding provisions of the Pension Protection Act and the parties who sponsor those plans on the implications of those funding requirements for their labor negotiations.
